FIFTH WEEK BEGUN.

World's Fair Attendance Daily Increasing.

SUNDAY CLOSING ENJOINED.

Judge Stein Holds That Congress Made No Law Compelling the Fair to Close on the Sabbath—The French Exhibit Thrown Open—Other Events at the White City.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Cathedral bells pealed out from the towers of machinery hall, ringing in the fifth week of the exposition. An ideal summer day brought out a multitude of people and augured well for the week's financial showing.

France's Exhibit Opened.

France's commanding and artistic pavilion in liberal arts building was opened to the public, and the wealth of the exhibit attracted the attention of the thousands who passed through the building during the day. The French exhibit is probably the costliest of any at the fair, the sculptured and painted entrance front capped by a grand arch costing a fortune by itself.

IN THE ART GALLERY.

The tri-color of the republic waved from every section of the pavalion and the French commissioners were on hand to welcome any official visitors. The installation will not be complete for several days but it is sufficiently advanced to throw open. The exhibits have crowded every inch of space and the same area in the gallery has been alloted to a variety of exhibits. In bronze and furniture the exhibit is not excelled by any nation at the fair. There was no ceremony attending the opening.

Sunday Closing Enjoined.

Judge Stein yesterday issued a temporary injunction restraining the exposition directory from closing the world's fair on Sundays. The decision was made in accordance with a bill filed some weeks ago by Charles W. Clingman of Chicago, in behalf of himself as a stockholder in the exposition company and as a citizen. The proceedings were in the state courts and were entirely distinct from the more recent case in the federal courts to which the United States government is a party. Judge Stein held that congress had made no law compelling Sunday closing.

Immediately after the reading of the decision, Attorney Edwin Walker gave notice that the defendants would file their answer in the course of 10 days, after which arguments will be heard and a final decision rendered later.

Physicians and Surgeons.

The woman's congress and the congress of the world's press have passed into history, and yesterday the third of the series of great international gatherings opened in the Lake Front art palace. It is that of the physicians and surgeons of the world, or rather of two of the schools of that great fraternity, the homeopathic and the eclectic.

Difficulty has been experienced in combining what is known as the "regular" profession in this congress, from the fact that over two years ago an international congress was arranged for at Rome during the present summer, and very few of the eminent foreign members of the fraternity were able to find time to travel to Chicago, and afterward find their way to Rome.

Hence for the present the new school of medicine has the field to itself, although it is probable that later in the year the followers of the old school may find it practicable to have a Chicago congress of their own. It is, however, the opportunity of the leaders of the new school, and that they have made the most of it is evidenced by the fact that the registers of more than a score of the principal hotels are filled for pages in succession with the names of delegates from nearly every state in the Union and from many distant countries.

Music of the Day.

Theodore Thomas put in appearance at festival hall, and it was understood that he would direct the free concert at noon, but he was still feeling badly and decided not to try it. The concert was late in starting, Mr. Bendix directing.

The open air concerts began about half-past 11, and were continued throughout the day by the Cincinnati, Chicago and Sousa's bands. The attendance was good.

PASSENGER TRAIN WRECKED.

A Blind Horse Causes a Disaster on the Monon Railroad.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 30.—A blind horse caused a disaster on the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago railroad. Vestibuled passenger train No. 36, from Cincinnati to Chicago, struck the horse in a culvert at Broad Ripple, nine miles from Indianapolis.

The engine was thrown from the track, rolled 50 yards, and landed in a gravel pit. Engineer George T. Plank of this city was killed, and Fireman Williams was injured. The baggage car was entirely destroyed. Two day coaches and one sleeper were dragged from the track and damaged, but the other four sleepers held to the track. Many passengers were rudely disturbed, but escaped serious injury.

Another Levee Gives Way.

ARKANSAS CITY, Ark., May 30.—A crevasse has occurred on the levee in the Mississippi river 14 miles above this city. The gap is now 200 feet wide and 14 deep and is rapidly enlarging. The water is pouring through in a huge volume and although a large force of men are hard at work in an attempt to fill it with sacks of dirt it is feared their efforts will prove unavailing and great destruction will follow.

Six Miners Seriously Burned.

TREMONT, Pa., May 30.—Through the carelessness of one of their number six miners employed at Middle Creek colliery of the Reading company were most seriously burned by an explosion of gas. The names of the unfortunate men are Charles Maurer, John Seager, Frank Huth, William Boltz, William Bretzius and William Erdman. The injuries of the first four are fatal. The explosion was caused by one of the men carrying a naked lamp.

Assassinated on the Highway.

LITTLE ROCK, May 30.—Corrial Griffin of Guernsey and Hemstead county was assassinated yesterday. He had been recently appointed postmaster of Guernsey and went to Hope to make his bond. While returning home he was shot from ambush.

DAVIS' FUNERAL CORTEGE.

Train Bearing the Remains Goes From Montgomery to Atlanta.

ATLANTA, May 30.—Governor Jones and staff accompanied the Davis funeral cortege from Montgomery to the Alabama state line. As the train drew out the infantry saluted and the cannon fired.

At Chelsea there was a slight stop. Every head was uncovered and ladies were allowed to pass through the funeral car. A few miles further about 100 men were drawn up in line with shotguns and rifles, and the moment the funeral car passed them a rattling file fire cracked down the line.

At Opelika fully 1,500 people clustered about the car. A heart of roses and a floral shield from the ladies and from Confederate veterans of Lee county, Ala., were put on board.

At all stations along the route floral tributes from ladies and children and respectful salutes from bareheaded veterans marked the run of the funeral car.

At LaGrange a solid wall of ladies and children lined the road for about 250 yards. Back of them stood the men in line. To the left of these stood another long row of about 200 young girls dressed in gray homespun jackets and skirts with military caps and red and white ribbons on their breasts. Beyond them again, a large factory had turned out its operatives and men and women bared their heads.

One of Mr. Davis' body servants is on the train.

At West Point Governor Northen of Georgia and his staff boarded the train which reached Atlanta shortly after 4.30 o'clock.

FAST TIME.

Less Than Twenty Hours Between New York and Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 30.—The first "Exposition Flyer," 20 hours from New York, steamed into the Van Buren street station of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern road just two minutes and 16 seconds before the time scheduled for it to make its appearance there. The train was ahead of the timecard at all stopping places between Buffalo and Chicago, although no special effort was required to keep up the rate of speed maintained and several minutes were lost at each station waiting for the appointed starting time to arrive.

The two fastest spurts of speed made during the trip were 83 and a fraction miles an hour, and 10 1-5 miles in six minutes and three and three quarters seconds. The first of these was made between Stuyvesant and Castleton, N. Y. The second was when the train approached Chicago a little east of South Chicago. As a whole the trip was without excitement or unusual incidents of any kind.

CYCLONE IN GEORGIA.

Several Places Visited and Great Destruction Done.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 30.—A severe cyclone struck South Upatoie, demolishing the roof of a railroad bridge. Several houses on the Pope plantation were destroyed, burying the occupants in the ruins, but all miraculously escaped unhurt. The destruction on this plantation was considerable.

Box Springs had a big scare, the cyclone skirting the edge of the town.

A number of houses at Juniper were destroyed.

At Chandler's Mill a house was blown down and George Parker's wife and daughter were buried in the ruins and supposed to be fatally injured. Particulars are meagre.

Reports from points east of Athens state that a severe cyclonestorm swept that region and many houses were blown down.

At Gillsville James Kinsley was killed and his wife badly injured.

In Banks county George Dowdy was killed.

Eulalie Visits West Point.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The Princess Eulalie took a trip to West Point on the excursion steamer Monmouth yesterday, being accompanied by her suite, General Horace Porter, Cornelius Bliss, Isidor Strauss and James M. Varnum and other prominent personages.

Dispatches From Different Buckeye Towns.

WORKSHOPS AND FACTORIES.

State Inspector McDonald Files His Annual Report in the Governor's Office He Recommends Some Radical Improvements—Other Items of Interest to the State Readers.

COLUMBUS, O., May 30.—The annual report of the department of the inspector of workshops and factories was filed in the governor's office yesterday by W. Z. McDonald. During the year 1,950 shops and factories were inspected, changes were ordered in 1,440 and compliance secured in 1,227.

Besides this, there were 1,168 tenement and mercantile houses inspected, 52 operahouses and public halls, 37 hotels and 38 wholesale buildings. In 426 cases additional fire escape facilities were ordered, of which 272 were complied with. The total number of employes in the shops inspected during the year was 91,385, of which 11,916 were females. The semi-monthly payment law was found to be fairly well observed, only 139 concerns being found that paid monthly.

The inspector advocates the establishment of a state normal training school, where orphans and children of aged and infirm people may be educated; and suggests a law against the employment of females before 6 a. m. and after 9 p. m., and requiring stationary engineers to be examined as to their skill.

Elevator Accident.

CLEVELAND May 30.—The fine Wade building was the scene of a terrible accident. Janitor A. P. Fairbanks was caught between the elevator frames and the brick walls of the well in some manner and crushed to death. William Gans, a young man helping Fairbanks, had his hand broken, and was removed to the hospital. Fairbanks had been employed in the building ever since its erection, and was highly esteemed by the business men. His body was so wedged in that it was necessary to break down a door into Broker Hilland's office to extricate it.

Recovered From the Waters.

CUYAHOGA FALLS, O., May 30.—Three weeks ago Gustave H. Schuler and Martha Kline, while driving, went through the Cuyahoga bridge, which was undergoing repairs, and were drowned in the river, 100 feet below. Their bodies were not found and search was abandoned. Sunday morning, four miles below where the terrible accident occurred, a fisherman discovered the nude body of Miss Kline lying in a pool. Portions of Schuler's clothing were also found. The young couple were to have been married shortly.

Mrs. Harrison Dead.

NORTH BEND, O., May 30.—Mrs. Mary Harrison, an aunt of ex-President Harrison, aged 78, died at the residence of Colonel McClung.

MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY.

An Entire Family of Four Found With Their Throats Cut.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., May 30.—Particulars of a horrible tragedy at New Haven, across the river from this city, have just reached here. John Hoy, his wife Mollie, his son William and daughter were found at 3 o'clock in the afternoon with their throats cut from ear to ear. The supposition is that Hoy murdered his wife and children and then committed suicide. The evidence points strongly towards this conclusion, but there are reasons to believe the family might have been murdered.

The bodies were discovered by Mrs. Mary Egan, Hoy's mother by a former husband, who visited Hoy's home. When she entered the house she was horrified to see large pools of blood on the floor. She rushed through the house and upstairs to the bedroom of her son and wife. The sight that met her gaze was terrible. Stretched on the bed was Mrs. Hoy and at the foot of it on the floor was Hoy cold in death. Both had their throats cut from ear to ear. Mrs. Egan ran from the house screaming. A short distance away she fainted and was carried into a neighbor's house.

After the alarm was given hundreds of people flocked to the scene of the tragedy. The doors were barred, however, and no one was admitted until 6:30 in the evening when Coroner Batton and jury viewed the bodies. The first room visited by the coroner was that of Hoy and his wife. Mrs. Hoy's throat had been cut from ear to ear with a razor. At the foot of the bed was Hoy with a large gaping wound across the throat, his head lying in a pool of blood. On a stand near by was a bloody razor. In a room back of their parents lay William Hoy, aged 8, and his sister Portis, aged 6, neatly tucked under the bedclothes, both their throats cut from ear to ear. Behind the right ear of the girl was a wound from the blunt end of a hatchet that was found in her father's room. The jury seemed to be convinced that Hoy committed the horrible butchery. Coroner Batton adjourned the inquest until Saturday.

The mysterious part of the tragedy is the splashes of blood scattered all through the house.

Mrs. Hoy was an attractive woman, 28 years of age. Hoy was 35 years old, and until six weeks ago was a trusted conductor on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. At that time he was suspended for getting drunk at Cumberland and has not worked since.

Officer Aiken, it has just been learned, saw a man hurriedly leave Hoy's house in the afternoon and chased the fellow several miles, but was unable to capture him. This statement makes the tragedy very mysterious. Much excitement prevails in New Haven.

Three Children Burned to Death.

CANONSBURG, Pa., May 30.—About 4 o'clock in the morning the dwelling of Samuel Skiles, who resides in Chartiers township, was discovered to be on fire by oilwell diggers, who were passing along. The men rushed to the house and broke down the door, just in time to rescue Mr. and Mrs. Skiles and three of their six children. Three of the smaller children could not be rescued and they perished in the flames. Mr. and Mrs. Skiles were badly burned about the face and hands. The fire originated from an over-heated gas stove.

Dr. Graves Released.

DENVER, May 30.—Dr. Thatcher Graves, the alleged poisoner of Mrs. Barnaby of Providence, was released on $3,000 bail. A new trial was set for June 14 but it is believed the case will never be called.

Planing Mill Burned.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 30.—The planing mill of W. H. Washburn and two adjoining buildings were destroyed by fire. Total loss $65,000; insured.

Two North Dakota Banks Closed.

FARGO, N. D., May 30.—The bank of E. Ashley Mears has been closed by the national bank examiner under orders from the comptroller of the currency. The First National bank of Fargo, N. D., was also closed. The examiner would give out no statement, but Cashier Mears said the indebtedness does not exceed $60,000, with assets five times that amount. The bank was called the National Bank of North Dakota, and was mainly a clearance house for the system of banks owned by Mears and his system of loan agencies. It had but few depositors in Fargo. No other Fargo bank is affected.

Died in Despair.

CHICAGO, May 30.—An inquest was held on the body of F. H. Milburn, the son of N. H. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the United States senate, who killed himself at the Saratoga hotel. The testimony brought out the fact very clearly that the young man committed suicide because he had despaired of being able to conquer his appetite for liquor and had concluded to end the fight. Chaplain Milburn, who is at Jacksonville, Ills., telegraphed that the remains be sent to him there for burial.

Young Girl's Body Found.

HUDSON, N. Y., May 30.—Yesterday afternoon the body of an unknown young woman was discovered floating in Mud creek, about two miles from this city. An autopsy revealed the fact that the girl was not more than 18 or 20 years of age and had been brutally murdered and that the crime was perpetrated about eight or 10 days ago. The only clew that may lead to her identity is a card found in her pocket bearing the name of Fannie A. Wycoffs.

DR. BRIGGS ON TRIAL

The Case Presented to the General Assembly.

BRIGGS DEFENDING HIMSELF.

Thirteen Hours and a Half Will End the Trial and a Vote Will Be Taken—Doings of the General Assembly — A Movement Toward Starting a New Theology.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—After the minutes of the last meeting had been approved in the Presbyterian general assembly Dr. Herrick Johnson, chairman of the committee on Columbian world's fair exhibits stated that the committee in view of the resolution of the assembly was in a paralyzed condition. If the exhibit was to be removed from the grounds as indicated by the assembly, the committee must be backed by the financial responsibility of the body. To remove the exhibit and return the subscriptions to the fund for installation would require about $2,500. There was $1,525 on hand. After some discussion it was voted to refer the matter to the committee on finance, with power to act.

Dr. Young, chairman of the committee on bills and overtures, reported upon a number referred to that committee. Answers to the most important were to the effect:

1. That, inasmuch as the presbyteries voted against the overture on vacancy and supply, sent down by the general assembly of 1892, it deemed it important at this time to overture the presbyteries again on that subject.

2. That the synod of Utah be erected, with Rev. R. G. McNiece as temporary moderator, and the synod of Montana be erected, with Rev. Andrew Wormser as temporary moderator.

These recommendations were adopted.

A memorial of 367 officers and members, giving an interpretation of the deliverance of the assembly of 1892 upon the inspiration of the Bible, was reported by Dr. Young, with the recommendation that it be considered answered by the report of the committee made Saturday afternoon. It was so ordered.

The closest attention was given Dr. Baker, chairman of the judicial committee, when he rose from his place on the platform to make the report of the committee as to the disposition of time in the Briggs trial. The arrangement, he said, was entirely agreeable to both sides.

Four and a half hours were allowed the appellants to open and close the case. Dr Briggs was allowed seven hours to reply and the New York presbytery, from whose judgment the appeal was taken, were assigned two hours, to be used in 10-minute speeches.

It was just 10:35 o'clock when Colonel McCook took the stand, and the great trial might be fairly said to have begun.

Colonel McCook was then followed by Dr. Lampe who presented the appellants' opening argument.

Professor Briggs then began his defense. In the course of his presentation of the defense, Dr. Briggs said he had been accused of teaching that many of the Old Testament predictions had been reversed by history and that the great body of the Messianic predictions had not been, and would not be fulfilled, which was contrary to the essential doctrine of Holy Scripture and of the standards of the church, that God is true, omniscient and unchangeable. This he had repudiated and wanted the assembly to hear exactly what he had said but which the committee on prosecution had omitted. He had said this: "Kuener had shown that if we insist upon the fulfillment of the details of the prophecy of the Old Testament, many of the predictions had been reversed by history, and the great body of the Messianic predictions had not only never been fulfilled, but cannot now be fulfilled for the reason that its own time has passed 'for ever.'"

All depended on the word "if," which the committee had omitted. He had disclaimed this charge before and disclaimed it now. He also disclaimed that he was guilty of teaching that the process of redemption extended to the world to come in the case of many who died in sin.

The dreadful doctrines of race redemption had been attributed to him, but all he had said thereon is connected with the incarnation of Jesus Christ. "I would that I could teach such a comfortable doctrine, and if the time ever comes that I can, I will gladly lay down my ministry in the Presbyterian church and go forth to teach the hope of salvation of some of these who apparently have died without regeneration in this world. But I do not hold that belief now. I can not."

Dr. Briggs devoted a considerable part of his time in his address to a defense of the action of the presbytery. He declaimed against matter of record in the defendant's support being rejected while evidence introduced by the prosecution received favor. The doctor also considered the logic of the case.

He declared that he had not said in his inaugural nor in any of his writings that he co-ordinated the Bible, the church and the reason; nor could it rightly be inferred that he did so.

NEW CHURCH PROSPECTS.

Dr. Briggs Wants to Raise the Banner of a New Theology.

CINCINNATI, May 30.—It is learned from authentic sources that Professor Briggs, now on trial at Washington on the charge of heresy, has been corresponding with E. D. Morris of Lane seminary concerning the best method of forming a new church. Briggs wants to raise the banner of a new theology.

Professor Morris has replied to Briggs' letter, attempting to discourage the scheme. He told Briggs that very few Presbyterian ministers would desert to a new standard.

The movement has not been squelched, however, as it is known that four well known liberal Presbyterians of Cincinnati have gone to Washington with the avowed intention of assisting Briggs' new church project.

PRIZE FIGHT IN LONDON.

Jim Hall Knocks Out Frank Slavin in Seven Rounds.

LONDON, May 30.—Jim Hall met Frank Slavin at the National Sporting club last night for $2,500 a side and a purse of $8,500 and knocked him out in the seventh round. The fight was a disappointment to the spectators. Slavin was the favorite in the betting up to the opening of the first round, but from the beginning he made a poor showing. He was completely outgeneraled at every point by Hall and was unable to offer even enough resistance to make the contest exciting.

When time was called Slavin's face wore a peculiar, dazed expression. He lurched heavily twice as he left his corner and was generally unsteady in his gait. After sparring for a few seconds he walked up to Hall and was received with a staggering right-hander, which almost floored him. Throughout the round he never closed his glove, and when time was called went to his corner amid the hissing and groaning of the spectators.

In the second r[illegible] improvement. He lurched about stupidly, giving Hall several chances to hit him as he pleased. Hall did not take advantage of his opportunities and the round closed without any heavy work on either side.

The third round opened with some light sparring. In the middle of the round Hall landed both right and left on his opponent's head, then gave him a stinger on the jaw and stood away. The men then fooled about the ring missing repeatedly when they came to close quarters. At the end of the round the referee warned them that if they did not fight there would be no purse for them. The warning had little effect.

The fourth round was a scrambling one. Not a single telling blow was struck, and the fooling of the previous round was repeated until the spectators hissed and jeered.

The fifth round was somewhat better. It ended with Slavin going down from a right-hander on the jaw.

Nothing was accomplished by either of the men in the sixth round.

The seventh round had hardly opened before Hall floored Slavin with his left. Slavin was soon up, but hearing somebody call time he turned towards his corner. Hall instantly shot out his right. The blow landed squarely on Slavin's jaw and sent him down for good.

The spectators hooted Slavin as he was carried to his corner. Disappointment and dissatisfaction with the fight are generally expressed.

Slavin was seconded by Jack Start and Jim Revan, and was attended also by his brother Jack. Charley Mitchell and Sam Blake, ex-champion lightweight, seconded Hall. Paser umpired for Slavin and Lord Lonsdale for Hall.

LAST OF A STRANGE PILGRIM BAND.

A Maine Woman In Jaffa Awaiting Christ's Second Coming.

An interesting story came to the surface at Friday's midweek meeting at the old Stone church. The Hon. George H. Ely related an incident of woman's faith that came under his notice during a recent trip through the Holy Land. In company with four or five tourists, Mr. Ely was seated on a piazza of a hotel in Jaffa when his attention was attracted to half a dozen boys playing in the street below. All but one of the boys had swarthy complexions characteristic of the country, and the one exception was light complexioned, with perfect Caucasian features.

"That boy," said one of the gentlemen, "looks to me as though he belonged to the streets of New York instead of Jaffa." Their interest in the little fellow was aroused to such an extent that they went down to inquire, and to their surprise he spoke a little English. He said he lived with his mother a short distance up the street, and the party, including Mr. Ely, walked up street and entered the woman's house, which proved to be a hovel of the worst kind. They addressed her in English, and she was beside herself with joy to hear her native tongue spoken, and to their utter astonishment she told them that her home is in Maine.

"Maine, my good woman! What in the world are you doing here?" asked one of the party.

The woman then explained that many years since a number of men and women in the Maine village she came from were carried away with the idea that the second coming of Christ was near at hand, and that when he does come he will first appear in Palestine. A colony scraped up all their savings of years, and with their families they emigrated to Jaffa to be on hand when Jesus appears.

"Do they all live here?" was asked.

"They did," she replied, "but some of them, discouraged and tired of waiting, went back to America, the rest died, and I am here all alone with my boy."

"And how do you support yourself?"

"By washing for strangers, and I have a hard time doing it. Some weeks all I can do is to keep from starvation."

One of the men told the woman that Jaffa was no place for her and advised her to go back to America with her boy, give him a good American education and bring him up as an American citizen, but the woman simply smiled at the suggestion.

Returning to the hotel, the gentlemen, all of whom were well to do, figured out the cost of sending the woman and her boy back to her native village in Maine, made up a purse and threw in enough for incidental expenses and spending money. This done, they offered her the money—and a good round sum it was—but she absolutely refused to touch a penny of it.

"This is quite a temptation," she said, "but I came here to await the second coming of Christ, and I intend to remain here until he comes, unless I die first."

That was her ultimatum, and no amount of argument could dissuade her from her course.—Cleveland World.

Changes In the Church.

The New Jersey state Epworth league convention, at its session in Newark, denounced the race track legislation, protested against the opening on Sunday of the World's fair and declared unanimously that it discouraged the use of tobacco.

The Rev. H. S. Springer of Arlington, in speaking for the Newark district, said:

"Bring back the amen corner and the mourners' benches, and let us not continue in the present formal way. Take down the advertisement of the undertaker that is on the front of our churches and put in its place the inscription, 'I am the resurrection and the life.' "Take away the little sign with 'M. E. Church' on it and place one 20 feet long across the front of the edifice having the words 'Central Methodist Episcopal Church' in big letters, every word spelled out. Let's have some sensationalism to cope with the devil's plans of work."

NOTICE TO BOND-BUYERS.

$1,500 Worth of Bonds For Sale.

OFFICE OF THE CITY CLERK, LIMA, OHIO.

Sealed proposals are invited at the office above named until 12 o'clock noon on Friday the 30th day of June 1893 for the purchase of $1,500 worth of bonds of the city of Lima, O., issued in anticipation of a collection of a special assessment made to pay the cost of improving McDonald street from Spring street to Wayne street in said city.

Said bonds bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum payable semi-annually on the first day of January and the first day of July following their date of issue, and said bonds bear date of July 1st, 1893, in accordance with the requirements of an ordinance authorizing their issue, and mature as follows, that is to say: On the first day of July in each year after issue one-third of the entire series matures, and said series of bonds consists of 15 bonds of $100 each. Both principal and interest are payable at the office of the City Treasurer or at the Banking House of Kountze Bros. in New York City, and said bonds are issued under the authority of the laws of Ohio, and an ordinance passed in conformity therewith on the 29th day of May, 1893, by said city council.

In the resolution an ordinance authorizing this improvement it is provided that if any of the property owners shall pay the full amount of their semi-annual installments in cash to the treasurer, less the interest included therein, the amount so paid shall be applied to the payment of the cost and expenses of said improvement, and bonds shall be issued and delivered for the unpaid remainder of the total amount to be provided. Therefore the finance committee reserve the right to deliver an amount equal to the whole cost of said improvement which is estimated at $1,500, or any part thereof.

No bid will be considered for less than the par value of said bonds, and all bids should specify the number of bonds bid for, and premium, if any is offered.

The finance committee reserve the right to accept any or reject all bids.

Bids must be enclosed in a sealed envelope and addressed to J. Boyd Douglass, City Clerk of Lima, O.

Given at Lima, Ohio, this 29th day of May, 1893.

A lively competition for the positions of State barkeepers has sprung up in South Carolina in view of the new liquor law, which will go into operation in that State on July 1 next. All applicants for positions as barkeepers must produce satisfactory evidence that they are sober persons, and at the same time know how to mix drinks.

The Infanta, not content to be a mere spectator of the Decoration services in New York to-morrow, will do her part in honoring the memory of the heroic dead by going to Riverside and decorating with her own hands the tomb of General Grant. It is a tender and womanly thought, doing all honor to the gracious nature that prompts it; and it will incite in American hearts a warmer and kindlier appreciation of the royal visitor.

Most of the Western States are to be represented at the convention to be held in Chicago on June 5 for the purpose of devising some means of throttling the trusts. The convention should, at the least, forcibly direct public attention to the vast power which these illicit combinations have so rapidly attained. But the real throttling act will have to be performed in Washington at the hands of the coming Tariff Reform Congress.

A Tree Started In His Stomach.

A strange case is puzzling local medical practitioners and the most prominent of the fraternity from Memphis and Nashville. John Henry Leake, a stalwart negro living on the plantation of R. L. Strong, a week or two since ate a lemon and swallowed one of the seeds, which it seems lodged in his stomach and attracting to it a certain proportion of the food subsequently eaten by him was soon surrounded by a clot or mass of matter which gradually grew larger. After a short time Leake began to suffer acute pains in the region of his stomach and applied to a physician, who diagnosed his trouble as indigestion and proceeded to treat him for it.

But the pains increased, and it soon became a matter of impossibility for the sufferer to retain any food except such as was administered in a liquid form, and the doctor began to suspect that the cause of the trouble lay beyond the ordinary phases of indigestion and declared an operation necessary. It was with difficulty that Leake was prevailed on to submit to this, but he finally consented.

The surgeons thoroughly explored the abdomen and intestines, but without finding any disturbing object, though it was observed that the stomach was distended to nearly twice its normal size. Leake suffered the greatest agony, with repeated efforts to vomit, which continued until death ensued. A postmortem examination revealed the fact that the seed had sprouted from the mass surrounding it, and putting out shoots had actually attacked the walls of the stomach as a creeping plant does a wall.—Trimble (Tenn.) Cor. Baltimore Sun.

No More "Lagniappe" In New Orleans.

"Lagniappe" will be more honored in the breach than in the observance among tradesmen of New Orleans in future. This is the name of the gratuity which the creoles were wont to give to customers, the recipients being chiefly children and colored people. It took the form usually of confectionery, pastry or nuts. The practice is a relic of the old Spanish domination in Louisiana. The word "lagniappe" is a transformation of the Spanish phrase "la yappa," which means a gratuity, a sweetener, to make a purchaser pleased with his bargain.

This custom it seems has never obtained outside of the second and third districts of the city, and "lagniappe" was so prescriptively grounded that it came to be regarded as a right to which the people were legally entitled. In an age of sharp and sordid competition, however, the tradesmen find the gratuity too much of a tax on their profits. A few days ago the Retail Grocers' association of the second and third districts adopted a resolution doing away with the picturesque usage.—New York Post.

Curiosities From Key West.

Dr. Einar Lonnberg has returned from his trip to Key West for the purpose of scientific research among marine animals. He describes the sea there as enormously rich in fish and the sponging grounds as the best in the world. He captured and brought with him 50 different kinds of fish, three of which had never before been seen along the Florida coast. He found many strange mollusks, crustaceans, actinias and worms, and the first—of the land species—were very abundant on the keys on account of the calcareous soil. On Key West he found a snake that exists nowhere else, also the great black scorpion, imported probably from the West India islands. An animal of semiellipsoid form about an inch, which he is not able to classify before it is dissected, is probably a new discovery.—Orlando (Fla.) Record.

YOUR HEART IS A MUSIC BOX.

Your heart is a music box, dearest,
With exquisite tunes at command,
Of melody, sweetest and clearest,
If tried by a delicate hand.
But its workmanship, love, is so fine,
At a single rude touch it would break.
Then, oh! be the magic key mine,
Its fairylike whispers to wake!
And there's one little tune it can play
That I fancy all others above—
You learned it of Cupid one day—
It begins and ends with "I love—I love,"
It begins and ends with "I love."
—Robert F. Roden in Vogue.

"MICKLE MOUTH."

The feuds of the Scottish clans are a proverbial part and parcel of the history of Scotland. When not at war with England, the Scotch have delighted to pick some petty quarrel with each other, and the occasion has often been too trifling to mention in history, while the consequences have often risen to matters of deep and sometimes fatal importance. But underneath all this some comic characteristic of the nation has peeped out, some ill concealed craft or cunning or close handed thrift indicative of the canny Scotsman, and which belong to no other people in such excess as to those of the "border."

One of these feuds, now existing only in traditionary lore, lay between the Scotts and Murrays, and at one time it seemed only too probable that the representative of the former clan would meet a disgraceful death at the hands of the chief of the latter.

Sir Gideon Murray, the laird of Elibank, was a chosen favorite of King James VI, who afterward bestowed upon him the office of deputy treasurer of Scotland. The laird was an honest, upright man, but subject to fits of passion, which, however, seldom lasted long and in the end rarely did anybody any harm. His wife was a careful, painstaking woman, a good wife and mother, and in her youth must have been esteemed a fair specimen of Scotch beauty.

At the age of 50, the time of which we write, she was still bright and blooming, her fair, yellowish hair still untouched by the frosts of time, and her good natured smile displaying teeth of the purest white, without thanks to the dentist even had his art flourished at that period.

The good dame was very fond of brilliant colors, and besides the endless variety of tartans with which she decked herself—wearing not only her husband's colors, but those of her mother's family and of her own maiden name—she enhanced the effect by numberless pink, bright red or corn colored cap ribbons, so that the good gentlewoman gave the appearance of a flower garden.

Good looking as the lady of Elibank incontestably was, no one could say as much for the three daughters, who were the sole heirs of Sir Gideon, all his sons having, to his great disappointment, died in infancy. We may, however, except one as being tolerably pretty. Of these daughters, Ailie, the eldest, was a red haired, freckle faced lassie, large and awkward, with the dullest of all blue eyes, "like pewter buttons drappit in a crock o' white butter," the lads said.

The second, Jean, was a prim, bony, old maidish woman, still and quiet, hardly speaking the day through, except to warn her sisters that they were talking too loudly.

The youngest daughter was fair and well formed and as merry and sunny as the day is long, but in spite of a pair of bright blue eyes and a straight nose her face was made homely by a mouth so wide and thick lipped that she was known from her earliest childhood by the sobriquet of "Mickle Mouthed Meg" all over Elibank town, and indeed wherever the laird and his family were known. No one was more sensible of her looks than Meg herself. She declared that she was afraid to gape or even sing, lest her head should be divided into two parts—and she often expressed a hope that in heaven she would not be recognized by her mouth.

This sunny disposition was everything to the Murray family. It softened the asperities of poor Jean, whose youth had suffered a sad disappointment, and it made amends by its kindness for the thoughtless and awkward rudeness of Ailie. It covered over the absurdities of Lady Murray's costume, and it was more than an even match for the laird's passionate temper, subduing it by softness only, as the horse tamer rules his fiery subjects. Yet the good and amiable Scottish maiden was invariably called by her uninviting nickname, and the young lairds never toasted the neighboring beauties without bringing in "Mickle Mouthed Meg" as a foil to the loveliness of their own charmers.

Meg had her own admirers. The gardener's lame boy from his armchair by the window, and his little table loaded with books and pictures, cakes and fruits, the gift of Margaret Murray, never failed to hail her coming as that of his guardian angel, and old, decrepit Sawny Macintire, the schoolmaster of Elibank when Sir Gideon was a young man, could never be made to think that Meg was not a perfect beauty, and when he had exhausted every old Latin epithet upon the child of his former pupil and the youths continued to laugh disdainfully at the amplitude of her mouth Sawny would say, "Hech, sirs! but the lassie's heart is as muckle as a hail regiment of such as your ain."

Meg had just entered her twenty-fifth year when her father came home suddenly from the next town, where he had been on business, and alarmed the family with the news that he had heard. Young William Scott, the son of Scott of Harden, was already making large incursions upon lands belonging to the laird of Elibank, and his depredations were made in open defiance of all law, and in a manner worthy of the most lawless freebooter. At least such was the story heard by the laird and by him believed true.

To sound the alarm among the laird's retainers, to summon the whole clan of Murray and to defeat the marauders through superior force was the old knight's easy task. Another seemed coming upon him to execute, which after the heat of passion and the flush of victory should be over would perhaps load his whole life with unavailing remorse.

Young Scott of Harden was taken prisoner and brought to Elibank town, where he was confined in a room in Sir Gideon's own castle until lawful measures could be taken to punish him. Having deposited his prisoner in safety, the knight of Elibank betook himself to the presence of his lady to report his deeds of martial prowess in rescuing a flock of sheep from the clutches of the borderers.

Magnificent in a new headdress, decorated with purple thistles and enormous white lilies, Lady Murray heard her husband's boast of his warlike deeds and congratulated him warmly upon preserving his mutton from the mouths which it was never intended to supply. Still she knew Scott of Harden, and she could not help feeling sorry that so fine a young man should have been mixed up with such an affair.

"What are ye gaen to do wi' him, Elibank?" she asked.

"Do wi' him?" asked the laird, with an expression more nearly resembling scorn than she had ever seen him wear. "Do wi' him? What he deserves. I took him red hand, in the very act of violence and plunder. I will bring him to the gallows, where he belongs, and I wish his whole train had but one neck, so that I could stretch them all at once."

"Hoot, na, Elibank—that is no so wise as ye are betimes. Scott of Harden is a winsome young laird. Would ye hang such as he when ye ha' three ill faured dochters in the house?"

The laird looked at his wife with a half angry, half foolish look.

"You were ever quicker to think of anything than I, Grizel," he said, softening down at the new aspect of things that presented itself through her words. "You are right," he continued after a pause in which he seemed to be weighing the question of having a border thief, as he had called the young Scott, for a son-in-law; "you are right, Grizel, my bonny woman; he shall take Mickle Mouthed Meg for his wife or strap for it. Meg is not so well favored as her mother, but she is far too good for Scott of Harden."

And the laird of Elibank actually went to his prisoner and offered him life and liberty and the hand of his daughter.

Scott of Harden had too often heard the three Elibank damsels made the subject of mirth among the young lairds of his acquaintance to relish the thought of marrying one of them and being thereby subject to such ridicule as he knew must attach to him, and he quietly rejected Sir Gideon's proposal in as few words as possible.

The laird of Elibank was powerful in his position of favorite at court, the prisoner had his life at his option, and he obstinately refused to profit by it. So on a day when all nature seemed to rejoice in the glory of its Creator, when sky and sea and earth were all arrayed in beauty and it seemed happiness enough to exist, the young and handsome laird was led out to die. An ugly, creeping sensation came over him as he in imagination felt the rope about his neck, but he was brave and had that strong determination that is born of obstinacy, and he kept on his way, with a highlander well armed keeping fast hold of him on each side.

Young Harden had no such thought. Just before they reached the public square, where the hateful gibbet was erected, the procession had to pass the castle of Elibank, as Sir Gordon loved to designate the old hall in which his ancestors had lived two centuries ago. It had a tower and parapet, it is true, and the knight loved to keep a horde of retainers, but his mansion hardly attained to the dignity of castellated grandeur, and its general designation was simply Elibank hall. Past Elibank Hall therefore the dismal troop wended its slow march. The prisoner involuntarily cast his eyes upward when close upon it, and in a moment the tide of feeling in his whole being rushed lifeward.

At a window of Elibank Hall, in the upper portion of the house, sat a lady, whose repeated applications of her handkerchief to her eyes betrayed that she was weeping. She seemed to have gone up thither to escape observation, the lower windows and balconies of the house being crowded with people assembled to see the winsome laird of Harden dragged to execution. Far above these thronging witnesses the prisoner's eye was raised, and his glance took in a form and face that but for a single fault would have been considered perfect. Gentleness and goodness sat enthroned in the face, and the throat, neck and shoulders were such as a sculptor might delight in copying. Only the mouth was too wide, but the lips were full, rich and rose red, and the mouth was redeemed from ugliness by the beautiful expression of mute sorrow that lingered around it.

At such a moment this expression of sympathy was more and dearer to him who was about to lay down his life than the most perfect beauty that the world ever saw. A moment more and their eyes met. As if entirely abandoned to her feelings, the lady at the window suddenly arose, leaned from the narrow sill and stretched out her arms as if entreating him to come back to life and to her. Impelled by a sentiment unknown before, the prisoner threw up his white, emaciated hands toward her, as if answering her signal.

Before the procession had half gone by Margaret Murray was in her father's library, whither he had gone to remain alone until the sad scene should be over. Already he had buried every particle of enmity against the poor youth. Already he would have given worlds to hold him back to life. To weigh this young man's existence—his bright, free, glad life—against that of a few sheep! He felt that he was guilty of murder, and when poor Meg came in with streaming eyes and knelt at his feet begging him to go to him once more for her sake he could not refuse to heed her.

Sir Gideon was large and unwieldy, and the morning was warm. He hurried as fast as possible, the streams of perspiration on his face attesting to his exertions. Meg watched him, and her heart failed her. She knew the hour that was to witness the fatal deed, and it only wanted a few minutes.

Would he get there in time? Oh, the agony of a moment on which the life of a human being turns! Her father was scarcely out of sight when the hour struck from the tower of Elibank kirk.

"Too late! too late!" cried poor Margaret, and she went back to her chamber to avoid seeing any of the curious multitude who, on account of her father's connection with the affair, had congregated at Elibank Hall.

Weeping and fatigue—for Margaret had not rested for a whole week, so excited had she been—had worn her down so that only the last straw was needed to put the finishing stroke to her life. Fortunately she fainted and forgot in insensibility the trial she had undergone.

She awoke with father, mother and sisters around her bed, each striving to do something for her recovery. Even the precise Jean had been weeping, and Margaret thought it was perhaps as much for the poor young laird's death as for herself that Jean wept. She wondered to see her father look so calm with a man's death resting upon his conscience.

But she had revived, was prepared to brave the worst news she could hear, and which it would seem that all were unwilling to tell her, for, one by one, they all slipped out and left her alone with her father.

"Poor lassie!" said he, more tenderly than he was wont to speak to his children, "it has been hard upon you to bear this. I only did what I thought was right, and you must try to forgive me for the shame I brought upon you in being refused"— would have been glad indeed to have purchased that young man's life at the expense of tenfold the disappointment or shame as you call it. I do not call it so, for surely any man has a right to refuse a hamely, ill looking lassie as your Maggie, with her thick lips and wide mouth. But, oh, father! you will, I fear, see this day's sad sight forever before you. I am fain to shut my ain een lest I should see him before me. And father, he was a man well worth looking at and saving. It was hard to see him going to his death, but I pity you more than I do him."

"When you have said your say, just leave off, will you, Meg? You are evidently a little wandering in your wits, and as there is a doctor in the next room I think I will call him in."

He rose and went out before she could remonstrate, and when he returned he brought in a gentleman whom in the dusk she did not recognize.

"This is the person who called forth your tears today, lassie," said the laird of Elibank roughly, but not unkindly. "He may do more toward your recovery than I can, so I will leave you together." And looking steadily through the gathering gloom Margaret saw that the figure which stood beside her couch was the same that had walked between the two highland guards in that sad procession of the morning.

What passed between them is one of the secrets of the past. But one thing we know, that the laird of Harden and Margaret Murray were married in Elibank kirk as soon as the bans had been published the usual time. Farther, too, we know that the marriage proved happy beyond the ordinary lot of mortals.

What was better than all was that the long cherished feud between the Scotts and Murrays was entirely at an end from this time. The father and son-in-law became fast friends, and such was the confidence which the laird of Elibank placed in Scott of Harden that when he was obliged to leave Scotland he left him in the management of all his affairs.

Acting as his representative, too, he carried 500 of the clan of Scott to the assistance of Johnstone at the bloody battle of Dryffe Sands.

As the lady of Harden, Margaret Murray was soon unknown by the title which fools had given her. The full, red lips always disclosed the sweetest of smiles, and her husband, proud of her sterling worth and virtue and feelingly alive to the love which she had conceived for him in what he once considered his death hour, never ceased to repay that love by an affection as fond and tender as her own—affection such as stretches pigmies into height and shortens giants into ordinary mortals and converts the homeliest face into the face of an angel.—J. C. Spaulding in Romance.

Early Purchases of the Indians.

Captain West, in the year 1610, bought the present site of Richmond for "some copper." The Dutch governor, Minuit, bought the whole of Manhattan island, the present site of the city of New York, "for 60 Dutch guilders, some of them being of a doubtful metal." Lord Baltimore's company bought thousands of acres of fine lands for less than that number of glass beads, including the site of the city of Christiana, "for which was paid one iron kettle of the bigness of five quarts or thereabouts."

Roger Williams bought Rhode Island, "Little Rhody," for "40 fathoms of white beads, strung." It has only been 255 years this spring since the site of New Haven was bought for "12 coats of English cloth, 12 spoons of mixed metal, 12 hoes, 12 hatchets, 12 porringers, 24 knives and some French knives and spoons."—St. Louis Republic.

The Mania For Suicide.

Another woman who has the suicide habit has turned up in the person of Maggie Benner of New York. Seven times during the past year has she attempted to end her life, but all have been unsuccessful. The first time was in March, 1892, when she jumped into the East river and was rescued. Several weeks ago she drank carbolic acid, and on Tuesday night she attempted suicide again by drinking paregoric and carbolic acid. She has also been sent to the Bellevue hospital four times while suffering from alcoholism. Besides these futile attempts at death she has been arrested for stabbing a woman.

Places In the Government Service Which Nobody Wants.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The office seeking epidemic is an interesting study. It constantly presents new phases. Few men can resist the offer of a good place in the government service; but, strange to relate, there are offices which occasionally go begging. Some of these places are refused because they involve great danger; others are too poorly paid to be deemed desirable. Assistant Postmaster General Maxwell is appointing an average of 100 new postmasters of the fourth class daily, and at least two-thirds of the appointments are to fill vacancies caused by resignations. This change is true in a smaller ratio during the later days of an administration, even when there is no fear of removal on account of politics.

The postmasters of this class do not always find their offices profitable, and they resign because it is to their advantage to engage in other business. There are thousands of these little offices in out of the way places which it is hard for the government to induce anybody to accept. A fourth class postmaster gets no salary. He merely receives a small allowance for office rent and certain expenses and is paid a percentage on the sale of stamps.

On the first $50 worth of stamps that he sells each year he is allowed the entire receipts. On the next $100 worth he receives 60 per cent. On the next $200 he is allowed one half, and on all sales above $350 per annum he gets 40 per cent. When the sales reach a point where they pay $1,000 or more per annum, the postmaster is paid a fixed salary, and his commissions on stamp sales cease. There are 10,000 of these offices which pay less than $20 a year, and it is consequently difficult in many instances to get a postmaster who will stick to his job.

Other departments also have undesirable offices. There are consulates and consular agencies in out of the way ports of the world that few patriots seem to want. In certain sections of Asia Minor there are places of this sort which have remained vacant for a long time owing to the fact that nobody could be induced to take them. Even the Persian mission, which pays $5,000 a year, occasionally goes begging, but it is generally given to some one who has plenty of money and a desire to see that particular region of the earth.

Only a few weeks ago a Missouri man was appointed consul to Vera Cruz, Mexico, a place where yellow fever rages perennially. He declined it, although it is the best paying post in Mexico outside of the capital. He explained that while he was not going into the service especially for his health he had no desire to seek an untimely death. The present consul, who has not yet been relieved, had the yellow fever a few years ago and has become acclimated. But the exigencies of politics demand that a new consul be sent there to take his place and incidentally to run the risk of an early taking off. Accordingly a Kansas man has been selected to expatriate himself and court the dangers that the Missourian preferred to avoid.

In some of the Central American states there are places quite as unhealthy as the Mexican port, and some difficulty is encountered at times in finding men who will consent to risk their lives in a service that is popularly supposed to be merely honorary, and which every candidate believes ought to be pleasant and agreeable. Many of the smaller places in our foreign service are held by natives simply because it does not pay an American to accept them.

The internal revenue service is sometimes hazardous, and often it is difficult to get good men for these places, especially in certain mountain regions of the south where illicit distilling is practiced. The pay of these revenue agents is small and the duty most dangerous. The records of the internal revenue bureau show that in the discharge of duty during three consecutive years 25 agents were killed and 19 wounded. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that the service sometimes suffers for lack of men, and that the applications for government jobs of this sort are exceedingly few.

There are undesirable places in the treasury department too. The life saving service is full of danger, and the pay is poor. Along the Atlantic coast and around the shores of the great lakes, where storms are frequent and severe, a patrol is placed each night during the fall and winter months. Each patrolman while on duty walks a beat of five miles along the shore and watches for signs of distress that may come from vessels at sea or in the breakers. It is his duty in the event of a wreck or impending danger to sound the alarm and call out the crew at the nearest life saving station. He must walk this lonely beat in all kinds of weather, and for this service and the additional dangers incurred in time of rescue he gets $700 a year.

The lighthouse keepers, who are almost constantly subjected to danger, receive even less. Twenty-eight miles south of Nantucket is the new South shoal lightship, and it rides at anchor the year round in a region of frequent storms. It is constantly buffeted by the waves and often breaks from its moorings and is blown out to sea. Last year the vessel made two involuntary cruises of this sort, one of them lasting for 13 days.

The pay of the keepers and assistants is small, and it is said that few men can be induced to spend a second winter aboard this craft. The marine hospital service is also full of danger at times, the men of course constantly running the risk of contact with dread diseases. Last year during the cholera excitement it was found most difficult to get enough competent employees for this service, since few men cared to undertake the dangerous and arduous duties of quarantine for the pay offered.

In the weather service there are a few places that sometimes go begging. The observer, who is on duty at the extreme northern station of North Dakota, when the thermometer ranges from zero to 60 degrees below, finds his task quite as unpleasant as his fellow observer at Fort Yuma, A. T., where in midsummer 90 degrees Fahrenheit is considered reasonably cool. Few observers care to stay long at either of these places, and some of the high and lonely mountain stations like Pike's peak, Colorado, are deemed hardly desirable.

Some of the employees of The Nautical Almanac office are men who have to struggle with all sorts of astronomical puzzles. Knowledge of spherical trigonometry and differential calculus is quite necessary, and yet the pay of such experts is in some instances only $75 a month. At the army medical museum one of the employees whose duties require a knowledge of the Chinese and Japanese languages is paid only $1,200 a year. Such places as these are difficult to fill when they once become vacant, owing to the small pay for the superior knowledge required. Not all the places in the government service are sinecures, and while the office seekers are numerous there are many offices which nobody wants as first choice. SYDNEY ELLSWORTH.

Texas' State Capitol.

The state capitol of Texas is the largest state building in the United States and the seventh in size among the buildings of the world. It is a vast Greek cross of red Texas granite, with a central rotunda covered by a dome 311 feet high. It was begun in 1881 and finished in 1888, having cost about $3,500,000. It was paid for with 3,000,000 acres of public land deeded to the capitalists who executed the work.—Exchange.

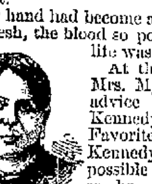
PROMPT ACTION NEEDED

Lost Her Hand But Saved Her Life.

MRS. MYERS RECEIVES HELP IN TIME.

Mrs. Edward Myers, of Athens, N. Y., had been treated for months in the usual way for erysipelas of the hand without benefit.

Her hand had become a mass of putrified flesh, the blood so poisoned that her life was despaired of.



Mrs. Myers.

At this critical time Mrs. Myers sought the advice of Dr. David Kennedy, discoverer of Favorite Remedy. Dr. Kennedy found it impossible to save the hand so he amputated the same, then gave her Favorite Remedy which drove the poisonous disease out of her system, cleansed the blood, thus saving her life.

Had Favorite Remedy been used earlier in the development of erysipelas, Mrs. Myers would not have had to undergo this terrible ordeal as it would have saved her hand.

The worst cases of eczema, salt rheum and scrofula, yield to Favorite Remedy. It cures whenever given a fair trial. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is to our knowledge, the only proprietary preparation endorsed and prescribed by the medical profession for the diseases for which it is recommended.

The Cause of the Backward Spring.

Dr. M. A. Veeder of Lyons, N. Y., who has devoted much time and attention to the weather and kindred phenomena, and whose reputation as a meteorologist is international, has advanced a theory to account for the general disagreeableness of the present spring. Dr. Veeder says that for the present the climate of this portion of the globe has undergone a radical metamorphosis, not unlike that which might have resulted from the locality being suddenly placed upon a high mountain. We are, in short, suffering from an acute case of derangement of the isothermal strata, which may last the entire year.

The lines of barometrical pressure are variable. They have become deranged, so that the state of New York is now included in a belt of reduced density or comparative rarefied air. The result is cold nights and mornings, cold winds and hot sunshine. We are in a mountain climate. Dr. Veeder insists that there is no telling when there will be a change for the better of the isothermal strata, but says it is his belief, which is confirmed by observations of the sun spots, that it will last the entire year.

Colored People In the North.

Within a few years there has been a large increase of the colored population of Philadelphia, and numbers of colored men and women arrive there every week from the south, as we learn by a report in The Ledger. Here in New York also there is a rapid and steady growth of the colored element, and a well informed citizen of color makes the statement that more than 10,000 people of the African race have arrived here from the southern states since this time last year.

Reports of a similar kind have come to us from Chicago and from very many of the other northern cities. We must believe that over 100,000 of the colored natives of the old slave states have left there for the north within a year. Nearly all of them seem to be able to earn by hard labor the means of livelihood in their new homes. According to Mr. Frederick Douglass they do not furnish an undue proportion of the lawbreakers and paupers of the communities in which they settle.—New York Sun.

If Two Worlds Should Meet.

Our world is spinning through space at a speed of over 1,000 miles per minute. Should it come in collision with a globe of equal size going at the same rate of speed, what would be the result? The very best thinkers of the age tell us that heat enough would be generated by the shock to transform both of the colliding bodies into gigantic balls of vapor many times their present circumferences. Some have thought that in case the center of the earth is composed of solid and cooler matter than is the generally accepted belief this might not be the case, but after searching all the leading authorities I must admit that I cannot find a more appropriate "finis" than the following, which is from an eminent scientist: Should such an unheard of event occur the heat generated would be sufficient to melt, boil and completely vaporize a mass of ice fully 700 times the size of both the colliding worlds—in other words, an ice planet 150,000 miles in diameter!—St. Louis Republic.

NOTICE TO BOND BUYERS.

$30,000.00 Worth of Bonds for Sale.

OFFICE OF CITY CLERK, LIMA, OHIO.

Sealed proposals are invited at the above named office until 12 o'clock noon on Friday, the 30th day of June, 1893, for the purchase of $30,000.00 worth of bonds of the city of Lima, Ohio, issued in anticipation of special assessments made to pay the cost of the collection of improving the Public square in said city.

Said bonds bear interest at a rate of 5 per cent. per annum payable semi-annually on the first day of July and the first day of January following their date of issue, and said bonds bear date of July 1st, 1893. In accordance with the requirements of an ordinance authorizing their issue, and mature as follows, that is to say: One-fifth of the entire issue of said bonds matures on each and every year after the date of issue, and said series of bonds is divided into 20 bonds of $1000 each, and 20 bonds of $500 each. Both interest and principal are payable at the office of the city Treasurer of Lima, Ohio, or at the banking house of Kountze Brothers, in New York City, and said bonds are issued under the authority of the laws of Ohio, and an ordinance passed in conformity therewith on the 10th day of April, 1893, by said council.

In "Section 3" of said ordinance it is provided that "if any of the property owners shall pay the full amount of their semi-annual installments in cash to the Treasurer, less the interest included therein, the amount so paid shall be applied to the payment of the cost and expense of said improvement, and bonds shall be issued and delivered for the unpaid remainder of the total amount to be provided." Therefore, the Finance Committee reserve the right to deliver an amount equal to the whole cost of said improvement which is estimated at $30,000 00 or any part thereof.

No bids will be considered for less than the par value of said bonds, and all bids should specify the number of bonds bid for, and premium, if any is offered.

The Finance Committee reserve the right to accept any or reject all bonds.

Bids must be enclosed in a sealed envelope and addressed to J. Boyd Douglass, City Clerk of Lima, Ohio.

Given at Lima, Ohio, this 22d day of May, 1893.

That on March 7 1873, he executed and delivered to one John Flinn a mortgage for $3000 on the north half of said lot No 20. That said Margaret Bastable was the equitable owner of said mortgage, and that the monies secured thereby were paid to her. That said mortgage remains of record vol. 10, page 189, of the mortgage record of said Allen county, Ohio.

That on the 16th day of October, 1878, he executed and delivered to said Margaret Bastable a mortgage on the whole of said lot for the sum of $2,000, which mortgage was recorded vol 16, page 388, of the mortgage record of Allen county, Ohio.

That said mortgages are both fully paid. That Margaret Bastable has refused to satisfy and cancel the same of record, and that they rest as a cloud upon plaintiff's title to said premises.

The prayer of said petition is that the above named parties, heirs of Margaret Bastable, now deceased, be ordered to satisfy and cancel said mortgage of record and that upon their failure to do so, that the Clerk of said court enter your satisfaction thereof, &c., and that the title of said premises be quieted against the claims of all parties herein notified.

Said parties herein named are further notified that said petition will be for hearing on and after the 1st day of July, 1893, and that they are required to answer by such time, or the same will be taken as confessed and judgment rendered accordingly.

THE BABE

The Father Wanted It and Went After the Little Tot

The Muncie Sunday News has this to say about several parties who are well known in this city

Readers will remember the McCarty-Staples elopment case, which was related in the Morning News Thursday

As was stated, Mrs D A Staples, wife of a brickmason and contractor of Alexandria came to Muncie Tuesday, under the pretence of visiting relatives Here she joined Sim McCarty, a well known bartender, of Lima, O They went to the National Hotel, where they lived comfortably until Wednesday morning, when Mr Staples arrived and in a very short time had the couple before Judge Hamilton They paid their fines and Staples left the city refusing to pay any attention to his wife.

McCarty also left the city, leaving Mrs Staples to hoe her own row She returned to Alexandria

The report was circulated and reached the ears of C J Carry, of 932 Reese street, Lima, O He not only heard of the elopement but was informed that she had committed suicide This interested him as he was her first husband and she was caring for his four year-old son, who was the joy of his heart

Carry arrived here yesterday morning and learned that she had not committed suicide, but said that he intended to get the child to take to his home

Became Crazy From Quitting Tobacco

There was a lively time on a Pullman car on the Southern road last night while on route from New Orleans to this city At Chattanooga William C Blackburn, of this city, a porter on one of the cars, began to act queerly He ran through the train screaming and nearly scared the passengers out of their wits At one time he took all the money out of his pocket and threw it out of the window He finally became so violent that it was necessary to chain him in an apartment Upon arriving at the Grand Central depot he was taken to police headquarters from which he was sent to the city hospital The only explanation of Blackburn's strange conduct was that he had been crazed by tobacco Some time ago he was an inveterate user of the weed but stopped suddenly Yesterday he took a big chew of tobacco before he began to act crazy —Cincinnati Enquirer

Shocking Kentucky Pride

The Home and School puts a check on impulsive state pride by a court catalogue of "things the Kentuckians can learn at the World's Fair" Among these are

"That Kentucky is not the only country on earth

"That a horse is not the noblest work of God

"That if our legislature is the worst in the Union it has competition

"That there is some beauty and a good deal of brains outside his own state

"That there is much in a name, and ours might be improved

"That the earth will not worship him because he is from Kentucky

"That there are many other people as hospitable as he, and a few more polite

"That a man is not necessarily a fool because he doesn't talk horse"

A Warning to Mothers

At the beginning of summer, mothers should heed the warning recently uttered by a health officer in New York city "Pure food must be used for the babies" he said Unless lactated food is used by the babies of Lima there will be dreadful mortality and an increasing amount of sickness this summer

The one safe plan is to be on the safe side, and feed the infants upon lactated food all summer

The Nizam's Pleasure Boat.

There has just been completed by Messrs Messum, the well known boat builders of Richmond, to the order of the Nizam of Hyderabad a pleasure boat peculiar in shape and for its size exceedingly costly in construction Two boats of the size of a large skiff have been joined side by side by a deck, upon the extremities of which rise a number of finely carved pillars supporting a pagoda shaped roof The whole of the woodwork is of teak, a wood which is not warped by heat As an instance of the great expenditure of labor upon the boat which is only 28 feet long by 14 feet wide, it may be stated that the tiles of the roof are composed of some 3 000 small pieces of teak most of which have had to be specially cut

There are no windows, but all four sides of the barge will be hung with pure silk of the richest quality while the deck will be cushioned in the same costly way to a height of some feet The barge will be propelled by two feathered paddles placed between the bows and stems of the two supporting boats and turned by handles after the manner of a small canoe The barge is intended for use on a lake near to which the nizam has a summer palace It is now moored in the river opposite to Buccleuch House at Richmond —London Times

People Who Met Scott

Under the caption of Scotliana a correspondent of London Notes and Queries records in that journal the further snapping of links which bind the present to the living personality of Sir Walter Scott himself by the death, within the past few months of four individuals who were more or less associated with him The correspondent states that last August there died at Selkirk an old mason who, in his youth, helped to build Abbotsford He used to relate that frequently, while engaged in his work on Abbotsford Sir Walter came and conversed with him and his fellow workman "For," said he "the shirra' had nae pride about 'im"

And then toward the close of last year died Dr Skene, historiographer royal of Scotland who was the son of Scott's old friend Skene of Rubislaw, and who had actually resided in Abbotsford as the guest of Scott Next there was the late Dr Wordsworth, bishop of St Andrew's, who it is believed accompanied his illustrious uncle the poet, and Dorothy Wordsworth on their tour through Scotland when they visited Abbotsford and saw Scott before he set out on what proved to be his last excursion to the continent Lastly, there died during February William Haldane of Carlston who was personally acquainted with Scott and was present at his funeral He had many recollections not only of Scott, but of Hogg Lockhart, Willie Laidlaw Andrew Gemmel (Edie Ochiltree) and Tom Purdie

Intellectual Progress In Boston

It is not unaffectedly pleasant to the average Bostonian of mature years to sit and listen to Professor Drummond's talk about evolution Those of scientific and highly differentiated intellects don't mind neither do the young who have been brought up in the nurture and admonition of modern thought But an scientific men and women whose brains highly shredded with more or less street are a little nervous while awaiting the evenings yet to come when Professor Drummond will undoubtedly make the final logical dash from the ape that yearningly and with irresistible instinct apes mankind to man who still occasionally apes the ape

It will be easy for members of a community nurtured on Browning to follow the lecturer then and people who have feasted more on the delicate fruits than the hardy roots of life in them intellectual and spiritual growth will take very kindly to the later lectures The material is always a question to the soil determined to dissociate the natural and the spiritual and for those to whom nature is able to be taken back into the physical memories of the fruit of beginnings of the race or to make those agreeable mental jumps which fling a man forward in the upward scale of being —Boston Transcript

A Romantic Wedding.

A wedding took place in St Petersburg on Sunday which excited very general interest It was the marriage of the daughter of the Semenovsky regiment of the imperial guard with Lieutenant Alexander Rodansky of the Eighty sixth Infantry regiment The young lady, who is now 18 years of age and has always gone by the name of Eugenie Semenovkina, taking her patronymic from the regiment was found as a baby lying half naked in a ditch by the men of the Semenovsky regiment as they were marching from Plevna upon Constantinople in December 1878

The little Turkish foundling was tenderly cared for and after a time baptized into the Russian orthodox religion the godfather being the surgeon of the regiment and her godmother the Princess Eugenie of Oldenburg The regiment intrusted her education to qualified persons, and the bride now brings her husband a handsome dowry, provided by her military guardians —St James Gazette

Court Dress for Ambassadors

Now comes the suggestion that our ambassadors abroad should adopt a diplomatic court costume It is doubtful however if it is acceded to The simple dress of an American citizen prescribed for our ministers abroad by Secretary of State Marcy in 1853 will answer every purpose Prior to that time American diplomats had worn a simple uniform in accordance with the directions of the state department Mr Marcy's circular just after Mr Buchanan was accredited to the court of St James, troubled Victoria's master of ceremonies and intimated that Mr Buchanan could not expect to be invited to court balls if he did not come in court dress Mr Buchanan answered that he had not even if he never appeared at court and he stuck to his everyday suit, which was a black coat, a white waistcoat cut rather high, a broad white neckcloth, black trousers and dress boots —Boston Herald

To Blow Up Cyclones

Dr C R Carpenter has evolved a plan by which approaching cyclones can be bombarded and many lives and thousands of dollars' worth of property saved Dr Carpenter says that the great Mississippi and Missouri valleys compose the cyclone centers of the continent His plan is to have stations where men can be trained to watch for a coming twister and then destroy it before it reaches the city by exploding it with torpedoes He said "I would have a station sufficiently high to permit the watchmen to see a cyclone when it is coming The torpedoes would have to be sent into the cloud scientifically, of course and therefore men should be trained to the service I would have the station attached to the weather bureau which would add in getting advance information of cyclones Strong marine glasses could be used at night by watchmen, and an alarm could be given in plenty of time My method would of course be of no use in hurricanes, but I am fully convinced that my theory is a good one for cyclones and well worth a trial."—Col Pittsburg Dispatch.

AT A CABLE STATION.

ISOLATED OPERATORS LIVE IN A WORLD ALL THEIR OWN

Picturesque Scenes at the American Terminus of the Great Transatlantic Cables

Thirty Men Have a Peculiar Kind of Existence by Themselves

To an outsider the words "life at a cable station convey a vague sort of meaning, such as the term "life on board ship" would imply to one who had never been to sea The very peculiarity of cable life attaches to it something of a special interest It will be my endeavor here to portray as far as possible what life is at one of the busiest and most important cable stations in the world land ing two ocean cables from Waterville Ireland two from New York city one of which is operated direct from Wall street, also a cable to St Pierre Miquelon, and working a direct land system in connection with and over the Canadian Pacific railway

It is a well known fact that cable stations as a rule, are placed upon the most outland sh spots imaginable, in thus wise throwing the operators out of touch with society and the world at large

Just picture to yourself a moment a small cape running out into the Atlantic on the most northerly point of the American continent A little to the south and situated somewhat on a hill you will see what appears to be a small village cuddling into the shape of a horse shoe The background is thickly clothed with small firtrees and immediately at the foot of the hill is a large lake with immature islands clothed in rich green foliage

Beyond the lake and as far as the eye can reach is one vast expanse of water dividing the eastern and western continents of Europe and America At once you are brought to the Canso station of the Commercial Cable company

To the southeast of the lake the broad Atlantic rolls along in heavy monotone while far away on the horizon a dark line of smoke floats leisurely in the wake of a passing steamer The station itself has a picturesque appearance in the glistening sunlight the handsome office with its bold front age standing like a sentinel at the western gateway There are the finely laid out tennis courts the broad crescent of substantial villas with their small patches of greensward and flower beds in front, and the neat little clubhouse with its small prayer where the men enjoy their pipes of evening, and watch the fleet of fishing boats or ocean travelers passing round the cape

At the eastern entrance are the bachelors quarters—a large 2 story building accommodating nearly 40 men Two and a half miles away is the fishing town of Canso with its 2 000 inhabitants

There is nothing outside to portray the amount of activity going on within the office The commercial world is in full swing the cables are being worked at top speed and messages are pouring in to be transmitted to all parts of the habitable globe Busin ss is being transacted between the London and New York Stock Exchanges almost as speedily as in the exchanges themselves Here one gets a grander idea of the importance of submarine telegraphy to the world at large and then and there No stopping, no pausing, no rush, but rush rush rush the clicking of sounders the working of automatic senders the tapping of keys all the steady buzzing of recording instruments

The operators have to the money market and their control of rectifying the position would with the least commandrums or flashing forth the tidings of some dreadful calamity here with submerged cables which link the old world with the new

Life at a cable station is not all sunshine neither is it all shadow We have our periods of dullness as well as our seasons of pleasure and intervals as well as dead stages We live in an unconventional manner but there are times when we experience a thirst for town life with all its rush and bustle merely for a change On the whole, however we may contrast and find happy there is such a sense of freedom of restraint removed from the cramped atmosphere of city life, Ramsnero one will, there is no one to say Whither goest thou? One can shoot all over the mainland or cast the deceptive fly on lake or stream and while the silvery trout from their various haunts There are no preserves therefore no gamekeepers or watchers

In season we have bowling tennis cricket rowing and other sports to brace us up for the mental strain of the operating room also our concerts, dances and picnics to mark the superficial side of life Naturally we have to rely on our own resources for amusement and entertainment and in a large station there is generally a fair supply of talent in various directions

When winter is upon us with its icy grasp when the trees and everything around is clad in a beautiful garb of white and glistening snow we don our furs and away we go cross country to the merry tinkle of sleighbells Snowshoeing and skating also form important features of our winter pastime

When the shades of evening cast their dark mantles around us we gather in the cheery clubhouse and over our pipes discuss the latest news from the outside world sum up reminiscences of other days talk of episodes in our lives and experiences at other stations in other lands with no foreign element to break our bond of fraternity

There is a strange Bohemianism in the life of a cable operator The constant moving about he has is subject to the living in foreign countries and mixing with different races give him a cosmopolitan education with a broad and generous view of humanity to the downfall of many narrow and popular prejudices I do not know of any other profession where exists the same fraternal feeling or spirit of clannishness as is met with in the cable service Let a man travel the globe, and the mere act of his being a Son of Mercury will insure him a warm welcome at any cable station he may visit —Col New York Herald

A Class Boy

The class of '92 which was graduated from Yale last June has a class boy He was born Saturday, April 22, and is the son of Mr and Mrs Ferdinand V Houston The parents of the class boy are both pursuing postgraduate courses in the philosophical department of the university It was only last fall that Miss — were admitted to Yale This is the first child ever born to the university whose parents are both members of it The mother was prior to her marriage Miss Helen Dawson and was graduated from Smith college in the class of '89 She spent several years studying in Germany and returning to this country married Mr Houston shortly after he graduated last June

Lost In Hunger.

During the cold and snowy weather of last winter fears about the North Beach life saving station on the Maryland coast were driven to desperation with hunger In their starving condition they seemed to lose the fear of man and actually approached the life saving station in broad daylight and attempted to steal chickens and even small pigs —Washington Post.

HOW TO BUILD A SILO

Directions Furnished by Professor King of the Wisconsin Experiment Station.

It is generally conceded the form of a silo ought to be either round or as nearly square as it is practicable to make it, because these forms give the greatest capacity with the least amount of side exposure The long narrow silos are wasteful both of silage and lumber A silo 32 feet square will have the same amount of side exposure as one 16 by 64 and for the same depth will hold just one third more, while the same amount of siding, material and work will inclose more than two thirds more silage and will require much less lumber to build it because of less studding may be used, the siding and lining acting as hoops, giving the needed strength, and because both the amount of siding and of roof material will be less. This is in accordance with data furnished by Professor F H King of the Wisconsin experiment station

The author very quoted emphasizes the importance of deep silos and advises to insure best ensilage that the depth should be at least 24 feet It is important that the silo walls be rigid enough to withstand pressure without being, springy to any considerable extent Smoothness of silo walls is essential to best results In constructing silos it is important to choose dimensions that will give the best feeding and the proper horizontal area of a feeding pit depends upon the amount of silage fed daily, and the rate at which silage becomes injured when exposed

Following is a table prepared by Professor King and incorporated in the eighth annual report of the Wisconsin experiment station This table gives inside dimensions of silos that will allow the silage to be fed down at a mean rate of about two or three inches daily assuming 40 pounds of silage at time of filling to be fed to each cow daily Capacity of the silo is sufficient for 160 days A silo 80 feet deep can be constructed if so desired however basement or 2 story barns are built

Wild Eggs Wall Tooth

The man who puts 15 eggs under a hen instead of 13, so as to make sure of a good lot of chicks wants more than he will get We don't like to deal with that kind of a person because he displays greediness in the first place and lack of good chicken sense in the second place writes a Tennessean to Southern Cultivator A hen will in nine cases out of ten hatch 13 eggs and bring nearly from that to that number of chickens from 12 eggs than from 15 eggs simply from the fact that not more than one or two hens in a dozen ordinarily farmyard hens are large enough to cover 15 eggs

Another mistake consists in consolidating broods by giving all the chickens to one hen when two or more hatch at the same time Don't do it It may seem all right but it is all wrong In warm days weather the two broods may do fairly well but just let a rainy chilly spell come along and then see how fast the smaller and weaker ones drop out of the race Each chicken has but chicken sense It will be much better and the chickens will grow faster and larger if each brood consisted of only seven or eight chickens There is no discussing the fact that the secret of success in poultry keeping consists in keeping all flocks small

The poor who puts out 100 or 200 little chickens all in one bunch in a brooder knows nothing about the necessity to observe natural conditions in poultry raising Nature intended for a hen to set on a small number of eggs and to care for a small number of chickens only and nature never intended for 100 hens to run out and roost together nor 100 chickens to be penned up together

Sheep In Orchards

Mr J S Woodward, at a meeting of New York horticulturists said that he always made a sheep pasture of his orchard and it was truth that sheep made the best insecticides he ever had He would put as many as 1,000 sheep on every 10 acres of orchard To feed them enough grass they plenty of limited mixed grass, which will make them ravenous fruit pickers The feed the apples and the scant red grass had nauseated on case out purpose and although he had not plowed his orchard in 15 years it was more cultivation than

Agriculture of the World's Fair

Nearly every state has a pavilion in the Agricultural building

Missouri exhibits the St Louis bridge in miniature in side of corn and wheat straw

Louisiana's nice exhibit is a peculiarly handsome one Cotton and sugar also make a fine show

Tobacco occupies the post of honor in Kentucky's exhibit

Corn is king of the Nebraska exhibit

The Green Mountain State makes an attractive display of the toothsome maple sugar

Wheat, corn and oats attract attention in the Kansas pavilion

A fine illustration of silk culture will be made by the Women's Silk Culture association of Philadelphia

The Empire State exhibits grain, grasses cereals annual and vegetable fibers root crops tobacco, hops and honey She will also make a handsome dairy display

The agricultural experiment station of the United States on the main floor of the Agricultural building and the French station adjoining constitute two notable exhibits which ought to be visited by every farmer who attends the fair

The exhibit of agricultural machinery will interest all progressive cultivators

Civil Service Reform

Civil service reform is moving on slowly It would be expedited if those who believe in it would help up to it As we have said before our trouble is that people are too good natured, and when their friends want places under a new administration—that is, places not vacant and only to be made vacant by the demands of the office seekers—these good natured people allow themselves to become part of the pressure for the places by their recommendations and solicitations It must sometimes look to the appointing powers as if the whole country rose up and demanded not civil service reform but positions in the civil service

There is such a thing as ruining a reform ahead of public opinion and thus injuring the reform and there are many positions which are political in the true sense and should be taken possession of by the party of the majority after every election But it is the duty of every citizen to do his share in eliminating not only the spoils system, but the spoil idea from positions to press upon them and enforce the necessity of continually extending the merit system, and of acting according to its spirit outside of the classified service For it is no exaggeration to say that the evils of the spoils system are illustrated in every session of congress in the history of modern American politics every disgraceful "success" is to be found at its doors every corrupting fund has here its origin It is the menace and enemy of honest administration in every community in the country, it degrades our legislatures, state and national and the cause of good government triumphs only when this pernicious system is thwarted or overcome —Cen

Schoolmarms Lectured by Nuns

Innocent little nuns have caused such a commotion among the lady teachers of the new Norwich school as Bridehem that a strike is hinted at unless the directors go gunning for the pestiferous beasts Although the building is new a large number of mice frolic about on every floor and the schoolmarms are in constant terror Feminine eyes glance nervously about beneath the desks and nervous hands twitch close to the skirts to be ready for retreat in case a bold mouse attempts her way

The pupils, a peculiarly fun loving whose sense of humor is but developed when mischief is afoot, do not hesitate to scare the bothersome mice so they will run toward the teachers The question is so give the school board will take action it is said, to abate what the pretty girl teachers say is a horrid nuisance —Philadelphia Record

MEMORIAL DAY.

How it was Observed in Lima To day

The Decorations of Graves This day—Addresses This Afternoon and Evening

Decoration day was most fittingly observed here to day by the general suspension of business decoration of the graves of the dead soldiers and addresses suitable for the occasion

Both the G A R and U V U took part in the decoration, and although separately, there was large turn outs of both

At Memorial Hall this afternoon decoration services were held by the G A R for the unknown dead This evening the U V U will hold similar services at Trinity M E church when Hon A R Thomas of Fort Wayne will deliver an address

PLEASANT INCIDENT

IN CONNECTION WITH THE DECORATION OF GRAVES TO DAY

A very pleasant and agreeable incident occurred in connection with the G A U decoration preparations

A large box of flowers was consigned to the local command for decorating the graves of Union soldiers from an ex Confederate, of Knoxville Tenn, with a touching invocation for God's blessing on the blue and the gray

These flowers were used in the decoration today, and were highly appreciated by the old veterans

Two large bouquets were also received from Tennessee for the grave of comrade James Nichols and that of his brother both veterans of the late war Such tributes as these will do more to cement the union of states than all the stump oratory one may hear of the dead

TOLEDO

The Objective Point of the Ohio Southern

The Ohio Southern railroad will run an extension from Lima to Toledo and the work of surveying the new route began to day, says a Springfield dispatch G F Fisher, a prominent official of the road went to Lima yesterday to take charge of that work It is understood that the entire right of way from Lima to Toledo has not been secured, but the work is now actively and successful progress looks to that end It is understood to be the desire of the Ohio Southern Directory to build up a great trunk line, and the determination is fixed to run the extension from Lima The completion of the line will give an independent system from the Ohio river through Springfield to Toledo and connect directly with the great trunk lines to Chicago The railroad officials refuse to substantiate the rumor of the extension, but enough has been learned to authorize the statement that the extension will be made

The surveying party started out over the line this morning

Street Paving That Will Come Some Time in the Near Future—The Bars Thrown Down—Spellacy Made a Member of Paving Committee

After selecting Wm Roberts as Clerk pro tem, the eleven members of the City Council present at last night's meeting transacted the following business, after reading the minutes of the last regular meeting

Mr Lawlor moved that the minutes be approved except wherein they ordered the reduction of the pay for laborers and teams on the street force Mr Lawlor said in support of his motion that the Council should not ask any one to work at cleaning the streets for $1 75 per day neither should it ask a man to furnish a team and do the work of a shoveler for three dollars per day He called for the yeas and nays It was a question of humanity, and he wanted to know how the Council stood on this subject There was considerable discussion upon a question which was not finished until later

The finance committee reported that in accordance with Sec 2700, they had no money to purchase West Spring street improvement bonds also McDonald street bonds and they refused to accept same, and asked that the bonds be advertised for sale

Property owners along West street asked for a bridge where that street crosses Hog creek, and asked that the old East Market street bridge be moved to that place when a new one was built there Referred to the bridge committee

The Chief of Police reported sixteen arrests for the week

The chief the fire department reported the fire alarm system was completed and that Mr Chanler asked permission to make a public test with the fire committee Referred to the fire committee

The Engineer reported on the sidewalks asked for on East Kibby street that the cost would approximate $750 and that all the property owners had not signed

The report was adopted and the Engineer instructed to ascertain the number of lots and report same to the Solicitor to proceed

Mr Foley thought it the part of wisdom to notify the persons petitioning for bridge on West street that there were no funds for bridge building

Mr Bryan moved that West Spring street property owners be notified to build walks at once Carried

FOR PAVING

The Paving Committee reported on the bids received giving the totals Three bids were received approximating $81 000 $24 000 and $22 000 that of $21 000 being the bid of Merrigold & O'Brien the only one that was regular They thought all too high and they advised that bids be readvertised for

Mr Spellacy—I think this unfair to our home contractors If some one comes to me and offers an article for a certain price, and another fellow comes in after having ascertained the first fellow's price and offers me a lower one, I immediately put him down as a fool The home contractors gave us a fair and regular bid, and they should be awarded the contract. They will furnish work to men in our city, and as a member of this Council I consider it my duty to vote to give them the contract

Mr Foley—I embrace the same views as Mr Spellacy Messrs Merrigold and O'Brien are good, responsible men That they understand their business and that their bid is reasonable is shown, as it is considerably under the estimated cost of the work They will do good work and I can see how the committee can look at it that way it does If outsiders get the contract they will take all the money away with them On the other hand, should the contract be awarded to home people the money received except that spent for material will remain here

Mr Lawlor—I would like to hear from the engineer

Mr Gerlaugh—Three bids were received In this I was much disappointed There were enough contractors here for twelve bids, but eight or nine of them combined for some reason Mr Merrigold bid was as low as I in every way as the requirements and was reasonable, compared with the prices paid elsewhere The bid was on a brick which showed an excellent test, and which the committee and myself thought the best It was also about $10,000 lower than the highest

Mr Hughes—The committee gave this matter its best attention, and since the bidding have spent most of the time getting facts, and I have heard a great many things I have endeavored to do what I thought best for the city I want to say that I have nothing but the kindest feeling for Merrigold and O'Brien I would rather give the contract to home people, but in this case I can't do it and go before the tax payers with a clear conscience. To my judgment there was no informality in the Detroit bid Six or eight men put in a straw bid There is some scheme in it The lowest bid is as responsible as any bid could be, but for the sake of having no suspicion of anything wrong, the committee thought it best to re advertise for bids.

The Solicitor in response to a question as to the regularity of the Detroit bid replied that it did not comply with the statutes, and if accepted it would be enjoined The bid of Merrigold and O'Brien was the only regular and correct bid handed in

Hughes—I don't understand why some people are so anxious to have this contract let to the home contractors There is something connected with this matter and I want to advise the Council that it had better re advertise

Bryan—I endorse what Mr Hughes has said and insist that we re advertise There is ample time

Mr Merrigold being called for, said This Council advertised for bids for paving the square I answered it by putting in a bid for several months I have given the subject all my time in order to inform myself I was in collusion with no one, and I bid just as low as I possibly could, and think I should have this contract

Mr Hughes—I have examined thoroughly into this 'I don't want to accuse any one of dishonesty but we had better readvertise for bids"

Mr Gretchland—We have a paving contractor, and I we had better respect their judgement

Mr Butler thereupon moved that the old ordinance limiting the bids to brick be amended, and that all paving materials, including asphaltum be admitted into the ring

Foley—I don't like the way the member from the Sixth charges dishonesty If there is any I would like to know it

Butler—Well if the ball is to be opened it might as well be now A gentleman who says he will make it fair it is told me that there was a combine among the brick men There was to be but two bids put in—one high—one low and Merrigold and O'Brien were to get in at the low bid The combine did not know that the third bid was to be put in

Butler—How long would it take to get necessary legislation to include other paving materials?

Solicitor—Seventy days

Butler—The asphaltum people say they can have the square in 30 days

Hughes—I am opposed to the change at present I am unfavorable to asphaltum owners on the square prefer brick

Mr Foley spoke of the defects in Canton brick and the unreliability of asphaltum

MISCELLANEOUS

Mr Merrigold was at this point on the floor and said I want to say to the members from the South "that if I did not meet with the other contractors on the work and that there was no collusion I will take affidavit to this and if the gentleman Mr Butler spoke of will make affidavit to the contrary, I want him to do it

After some further discussion the report of the paving committee was adopted

Bill presented by the city auditor, receipts were referred to the finance committee

Ordinances for the improvement of Market and Spring, treets were passed

OHIO SOUTHERN

An ordinance looking to modification of the ordinance recently passed granting the Ohio Southern the use of Sugar street was introduced and upon the request Mr Fisher was allowed to use and read it Copies of the ordinance are to be furnished the council and the street committee to look the proposed ordinance over and report at next Council meeting

Mr Taylor received in money to keep up two of men and teams employed by the city at $2 50 and $2 00 Messrs Fawler Spellacy and Gerlaugh spoke in favor of the motion and Mr Hughes against The motion carried

The location of a light on Jackson street was referred to the light committee

MISCELLANEOUS

Mr Foley asked that Mr Wright an asphaltum representative be granted the privilege of addressing Council Mr Wright said We simply ask the right to be heard We have put in 15 miles of asphalt paving in one of the principle cities in which we have taken up and replaced all other paving materials Where it is once put in the people will have nothing else We have refer to all climates Built in Chicago New Orleans in which cities our pavements have been down from 10 to 15 years It can be put in cheaper here because of the condition of your streets There is no test of traffic that we will not undertake It is the most easily repaired of all pavements We guarantee it for 5 years and thereafter insure for any number of years for a small cost

J C Ebert—This is a plain, business proposition We have put up one through one force What we want is competition Let everybody in The brick bid were too high Those favoring asphaltum have considerably experience It is the cheapest and best pavement In Denver they are taking up granite and putting asphaltum down where they do the heaviest hauling

Wright In case you permit bids on asphaltum I would like to have a committee of council visit Chicago at our expense, and look at the pavements there

Frank Holmes There is no question in the mind of anyone who has traveled but that asphaltum is the pavement I would like to see competition Dr Baxter, Mr Van Dyke and Mr Lufkin all favor asphaltum

Ball I am a property owner and believe in giving all a chance

Hughes If we make this change we will not get any paving done this year

Butler I move to reconsider and rescind that portion of the paving committee's report instructing the clerk to readvertise for brick bids alone that the old ordinance be repealed and a new one admitting all kinds of material be drawn by the solicitor

Solicitor I don't know where we are It will take a week to look the matter up and at once so decided

The street commissioner was ordered to fix the Beeman sewer

The engineer and street commissioner were instructed to investigate the cutting down of the grade of Ford street by L E & W

Upon motion of Mr Hughes the solicitor was instructed to prepare an ordinance compelling those owning cows to lead them with a rope through town, in order to preserve the lawns

Mr Spellacy was appointed to fill the vacancy on the paving committee after which council adjourned

THE SPELLING REFORM

One can almost tell what section of the country a man comes from and a well known citizen who has lived in Washington a last night by the kind of tobacco he uses both chewing and smoking Take westerners for instance They want a sweetening tobacco and will have nothing else

Plain granulated American leaf is what they smoke The middle states man—the individual from Illinois Ohio and Indiana—will take nothing but fine cut in which the natural taste of the weed has been preserved

Here too they are patterning after the people of the east and the north in fact the whole country is turned this way and Globe Navy Plug and Globe Fine Cut are the most universally used tobaccos If their people will not allow such a luxury as plug American leaf is good enough for them

Of course both Boston and New York are cosmopolitan cities where everything, from Old Virginia dogtail to cornhusk and the dudes of Ireland to the finest imported cigars and cigarettes are consumed daily by thousands of pounds There is a certain refinement and taste in the method of Everything goes

In the southern states the leaf tobacco is the only tobacco used no matter to what purpose the weed may be put If plug you will find only natural leaves Of course all kinds and qualities of tobacco are manufactured in the south but all the home trade and southerners ask for is purity —Richmond Star

Chill to Chicago In a 22 foot Boat

An eccentric navigator named Bosman proposes to make a trip from Valparaiso to Chicago in a 22 foot boat and has actually sailed away from Valparaiso on his long voyage He comes via Panama, whence his craft will be transported to Colon by rail From Colon he will embark for Chicago by way of the St Lawrence river and if he does not come to grief in his perilous undertaking expects to arrive in Chicago about the middle of June Mr Bosman appears to forget that the Hudson river and the Erie canal furnish him a much easier as well as shorter route to the great city of the marvelous show and the dangers of the longer St Lawrence route should not be deliberately counted —Panama Star and Herald

She Saved the License

One should not be too confident and precipitate in affairs of the heart James McCarthy of Norfolk has learned this bitter lesson Friday he purchased of the town clerk a license to marry a certain lovely widow on whom his favors fell

With the parchment in his vest pocket he presented himself before the widow and for the first time asked her to be his cherished bride and in the certainty of her answer he showed her the precious license The proposal was so sudden and the swain so sure that the widow was mollified and refused him with considerable emphasis

Mr McCarthy was dazed for a moment and then realizing his discomfiture he dashed the license to the floor, danced a break down on it and left the house The next day says the local chronicles, the economical widow took the license back to the town clerk and request'd him to hold it until the right man wanted it her —Buffalo Courier

FROM

INGERSOLL'S DECORATION DAY ADDRESS.

New York, May 30, 1882.

The flag for which the heroes fought, for which they died, is the symbol of all we are, all we hope to be It is the emblem of equal rights It means free hands, free lips, self government, and the sovereignty of the individual It means that this continent has been dedicated to freedom. It means universal education—light for every mind, knowledge for every child

* * * * * * * * * * *

That flag is the emblem of a supreme will, of a nation's power Beneath its folds the weakest must be protected and the strongest must obey It shields and canopies alike the loftiest mansion and the rudest hut That flag was given to the air in the Revolution's darkest days It represents the sufferings of the past, the glories yet to be, and like the bow of heaven, it is the child of storm and sun "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed" In defense of this sublime and self-evident truth the war was waged and won. To-day we remember with gratitude all the heroes of the revolution
